

Empowering Youth to End Domestic Violence

Intern

Break the Cycle Washington, DC's full-time and part-time law student, graduate student, undergraduate and other interns have the opportunity to be exposed to a wide range of work and experiences.

Legal Internship:

Legal interns perform traditional legal research and writing on various domestic violence, family, criminal and general public interest law issues. The research conducted is on issues that affect the lives and safety of the youth that Break the Cycle serves.

Interns also work with Break the Cycle staff attorneys to do client intake, safety planning, case preparation, court accompaniment, and drafting legal documents. They are also trained to take crisis calls and provide referrals and advocacy.

Programs Internship:

Interns teach Ending Violence: A Curriculum for Educating Teens on Domestic Violence and the Law, attend community meetings, and conduct various other forms of outreach.

Media work as well as legislative drafting and policy work is also a possibility.

Development & Communication Internship

Development & Communications Interns will work with our Director of Operations, providing support in the areas of fundraising, events and communications. Responsibilities may include:

- Designing and implementing toolkits, printed solicitations and e-mail campaigns to fundraise and "friend-raise" for Break the Cycle.
- Researching and profiling foundation and corporate donor prospects.
- Developing and drafting grant applications and proposals.
- Assisting with other fundraising and community relations efforts such as event planning and volunteer programming
